Our Unfinished Library.

The music of saw and hammer, after several months of rest, has been resumed in the Bloomfield Library Building, and it awakens the enthusiasm of THE RECORD. We feel like cheering them on, and bespeaking for the Directors in this revival of pleasant sounds, a responsive chorus of good will and generous aid throughout the town.

This period of rest has been beneficial to the enterprise, rather than detrimental. Against all the harsh criticisms that have been hurled against it, the building still stands, unharmed by the hard knocks it has received, and is now, it would seem, in a healthier and fairer way than ever of being completed. It rests however, with the people to say how far the Directors may now proceed. They have recently met with sufficient encouragement by new subscriptions and payment of old ones, to warrant them in expending enough money to make the hall available for fairs, concerts, and other public gatherings. That, we understand, they propose to do.

If the right spirit of unity and enterprise is manifested, there is no reason why we may not predict that early in the Centennial year, just now upon us, Bloomfield will dedicate her fully completed Library Building to public use. If Messrs. Davis, Page, Morris, Garabrant and the other Directors should be obliged to again suspend operations, through indifference or hinderance on the part of their fellow citizens, the discredit which will attach to the town will be deep and lasting. There need be no question raised as to the wisdom of their decision in going forward at this time. The building ought, on many accounts, to be completed for the purposes for which it was begun—a public hall and library. To allow the property to be sacrificed, or diverted to other uses—perhaps prejudicial to the interests of the town—would be the height of folly. folly. We must finish it, and not only that, the Library Association organization must be maintained, as a representation of the conservative as well as the vigorous and progressive elements of our village.

Such, at least, are our views of the resumption of work on this building. We earnestly hope the Directors will now have all the substantial encouragement they need. It is suggested that on WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY, Feb. 22, 1876, the Hall be formally opened. Let a Grand Concert or Fair be gotten up, for that occasion, which will not only dedicate the building, with becoming eclat, but provide means, if not previously subscribed, for the furnishing and seating of the structure.

Our Roads.

It has been the intention of the Town Committee to give the lower portion of Broad street a coating of Pompton gravel, but they have been disappointed in getting a supply of the material. Several boat loads were brought down in the Spring, but the gravel was used in making the Park sidewalk, and for other purposes, so that none of it was put upon the public roads.

We are of the opionion that the best solution of our road question is in the use of this hard gravel. It can be had, as we understand, at the mere cost of boating and unloading it, which amounts to an insignificant sum. The cost of carting it from the canal is the chief item of expense, and that cannot be a very heavy one. Broad street is now pretty well graded, and if a crowning of this hard gravel were put on, there seems to be little doubt that it would be a greatly needed and very satisfactory improvement. If not too late in the season would it not be well to treat in this way a part of this thoroughfare, before winter sets in,—say from the Centre to Liberty street? By doing so the cost of this manner of fixing our thoroughfares would be definitely ascertained.

Mr. William Sharp, a well-known and widely respected resident of Bloomfield, died on Sunday last after a very brief illness from pneumonia. Mr. Sharp had but recently entered upon his avocation as janitor and superintendent of the Central School building, where he had already won, through his efficiency and faithfulness, the appreciative esteem and good-will of all connected with the schools. He was engaged with his duties until within a day or two of his death. His funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, at the M. E. Church, of which he was a prominent member. Rev. E. W. Burr preached an appropriate funeral discourse before a large audience of sympathizing friends and relatives. Olive Branch Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral in a body, together with a delegation of Masonic brethren. The Trustees of the public school, as well as a considerable number of teachers and scholars, were also in attendance.

Autumn Thoughts.

EDITOR BLOOMFIELD RECORD:

I am in the habit of making an annual visit to Bloomfield every year, and, generally, about this season of it, when the first touches of frost come to notify us that the summer is past and gone. And there is no place, I think, where the declining year arrays herself in such charming apparel—such manifold tints of resplendent adorning,—as in the vicinity and bounds of your beautiful village. From whatever direction we approach it, Bloomfield seems quietly nestling among its own thick clustering trees, and an air of calm and seclusion and content broods over it, such as is noticable, I think, no where else in the same degree. Hence at this time of the year when comes that hush of nature which intervenes between the fervor of summer and the rudeness of winter, there is, to me, a peculiar attraction in the quiet and seclusion and changing foliage of Bloomfield, as harmonizing exactly with that repose and sweet, sad enjoyment of soul and feeling that invariably comes to all of us with these "melancholy days" of autumn. No where, it seems, does the foliage change so imperceptibly, and the leaves fall so gently, as at Bloomfield.

In keeping with the suggestions of the place and season I beg to express my appreciation of what I deem one of the chief points of attraction about your prosperous village, and the point, above all others, that shows the most marks of improvement and progress. I refer to your beautiful cemetery. I remember it a few years ago when it was without form or comeliness, a mere jumble of ragged graves and crooked headstones, stretching along the lowland in from about the range of the present entrance, without order or system, or any walks or carriage ways better than tangled footpaths. Everything that could speak of death, or picture it to the imagination as hateful and repellant, was there. Nothing that suggested the sleeping friend, the temporary resting place, the future reawakening, and the life hereafter, was, at all, visible there. No intimation of the belief that the grave-sleep of the Christ had made "the bed of death sweet and and pleasant to all his followers" in the future. The Christian faith that makes death the entrance into a new and purified life and the grave the very gate of Heaven, had no symbolization in this neglected resting place of your village dead.

But how notably is all this now changed, and what a different impression do we receive now in visiting this "silent city of the dead." And, I might say, what a truer, as well as healthier, lesson do we all now receive in entering its confines, for our thoughts, instead of being attracted, as they used to be, to the cold, forbidding, neglected-looking earth, are now at once arrested by the pleasant, trim, orderly plots, and instinctively, our minds float up above the dull earth and the coffined clay, and think of the departed as something above and beyond and accessible. Your cemetery, in its greatly improved appearance, thus becomes a potent educator of our tastes and feelings, and so, like all beautiful things, becomes a joy forever; but it, also, in language unknowing sect or creed or nationality, preaches to us with a silent eloquence more persuasive than tears of duty and life and immortality.

The agents that have accomplished this happy transformation, I understand, have been Mr. O'Hare, the present efficient manager, sustained and directed by Dr. Davis, the most active and progressive of the trustees. The former has been hands to the latter, as I learn, embodying and prosecuting his plans and suggestions; or rather what Grant was to Stanton, encouraged and enabled to achieve the successes he did by the cooperation and support afforded him by the great war minister. But however the credit may be apportioned, the excellent results appear in one of the neatest and handsomest village cemeteries in all the country. And although there is evidently much yet unfinished, yet there is so much in progress and so much outlined for accomplishment that we can see that the object is to far outstrip and excel the results already attained. And when, one day, Dr. Davis and Mr. O'Hare come to occupy their allotted "six feet by two" space within the borders of the grounds they have done so much to arrange and beautify, the most expressive and appropriate epitaph for each, commemorative of their work, will be that of Sir Christopher Wren, in St. Paul's Cathederal, London: "Respice,"—Look Around.

But Paterson claims something more than the interest of mere admiration in your beautiful cemetery. Some of our sacred dead are there, and thus our hearts are in the soil. Last Hallow-eve night Miss Bowering was here at home, the shining centre of a group of young companions, like herself radiant with the flush of young, exultant health and happiness. The light of twenty summers was on her brow, their music in her heart. Now she sleeps the long dreamless sleep in one of the new plots in the north east extremity of the grounds adjoining the lake. The grass seems to grow there the greenest and the kisses of the dew seem to linger there longest, but she sleeps deep, and neither step of stranger nor voice of friend disturb or interest her.

> "Even the grave is a bond of union:
> Spirit and Spirit best hold communion!
> Seen through Faith, by the Inward eye.
> It is after Life they are truly nigh!"

PATERSON, N. J. Nov. 6, 1875.

Rev. George Guirey, late of Boston, will preach in the Baptist church next Sabbath morning and evening. The public are cordially invited. Seats free.

Moody and Sankey.

MR. EDITOR:—Permit me to call the attention of your readers to a work issued during the present month; the perusal of which, with the divine blessing, will do incalculable good. I refer to the LIVES AND LABORS OF MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY, by the Rev. Dr. W. H. Daniels. The author was a neighbor and friend of Mr. Moody, both before and after the Chicago fire; had a personal knowledge of his years of unparalleled labors in Mission Sunday School, and other good work in the West; went with him and his "sweet-voiced" companion across the Sea—and saw for himself what God had wrought in the conversion of scores of thousands, in England, Scotland and Ireland. The record is in profound sympathy with what the Evangelists have accomplished, is written with graphic power, is complete and reliable—and better than all, gives all the glory to God. No Christian can read it without having his soul stirred to its very depths, and asking—"Lord what wilt Thou have ME to do?" And no merely speculative believer in divine revelation can follow its wonderful statements without realizing the importance of giving immediate attention to the soul's salvation. It is the conviction of many who have read it that next to the Inspired Word, the voice of the living Ministry, and believing prayer—nothing is better calculated than this book to promote a true revival of religion. For its marvellous record of facts and fascinating style enchain the attention of those who have felt no special interest in their own personal salvation. Never since the first-called of the apostles, the "beloved brother, Paul," passed from the martyr's triumphs into the presence of their dear Lord have the annals of the Church furnished such evidence of the Presence and Power of the Divine Spirit as we find in these pages.

E. J. NEWLIN.

The book referred to by Dr. Newlin contains most interesting biographical accounts of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, together with a connected narrative of the remarkable evangelistic work in which they have been engaged, particularly across the ocean. It contains the portraits of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, also many other illustrations.

Rev. Dr. Kennedy says of this book: "I have read it from the beginning to the end. It is a work of intense interest. I cordially endorse the statements of earnest workers that whilst it strikingly illustrates the grace and power of God, its perusal and circulation will do incalculable good."

Copies have been placed on sale at Dr. White's Drug Store, the price being $2.00.

Eucleian Society Lecture Course.

This Society has arranged for a course of four lectures as follows:

Hon. Cortlandt Parker, Dec. 1, 1875.
Hon. John Whitehead, Dec. 15, 1875.
Rev. H. A. Butts, D. D., Jan. 26, 1876.
Hon. Amzi. Dodd, Feb. 16, 1876.

These lectures, for various reasons, ought to command the hearty support of our townspeople. The young men of the Society have done and are doing a commendable work in fostering a literary taste in the village, and therefore should be encouraged. Several of the gentlemen who are announced as lecturers are our own townsmen and well known fellow-citizens, and that fact, together with their conceded ability, leads us to reasonably anticipate that they will be welcomed by large audiences. Dr. H. A. Butts, who lectures on Jan. 26, is connected with the Drew Theological Seminary. The price of Course Tickets is only $1, thus being in accordance with the times. We hope the Society will be liberally patronized in this enterprise. The lectures are to be given in Westminster church.

Town Committee Proceeding.

Regular meeting, Friday evening, Nov. 15th.

Collector reported assessments for sidewalk on Bloomfield avenue collected, except $187,09.

The following bills were ordered paid: Wm. Smollin, for grading roads &c., $25.

Commissioners of Appeal, $18, Contingent.

Israel Coe, for Tax Warrant, 1204 names, $24, Contingent.

G. O. Gillett, for dinners furnished Inspectors of Election, $29. Poor Account.

Hon. J. W. Taylor, for legal services, $25, Contingent.

J. M. Walker, $579. Poor Account.

The Clerk was directed to write to the President of the Board of Freeholders in reference to ownership of stone removed from the race on Washington avenue.

In response to an invitation given from the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church last Sunday, about 140 members of the congregation participated in a Sociable given at the Parsonage on Wednesday evening last. A very pleasant degree of cordiality characterized the occasion, not a little of the vivacity, doubtless, being due to the fine qualities as entertainers of the genial pastor and his gifted wife. The spirit of sociability they imparted seemed to pervade the entire gathering.

The Newark, Bloomfield & Montclair Horse Car Railroad, depot grounds, car-houses, stables, horses, cars, and all equipments, are to be sold at public auction on the 17th day of January next, by Charles S. Graham and John W. Taylor, Trustees for the mortgagees, in default of payment of interest on a mortgage for $400,000.

Our Daily Prayer Meeting.

"Lord, in the morning Thou shalt hear my voice ascending high."

The marked increase in attendance at this early hour, accompanied with a humble and earnest spirit of prayer, is most cheering. Side by side with the venerable pilgrim sits the little child, while the trembling tones of the former in glorious old "Coronation," contrast sweetly with the refrain of the sweet voice of the Sunday School scholar in "Jesus loves even me." It is felt by all to be a privilege to be there, and we very much doubt if the hall would accommodate all, if those who are detained by domestic duties or obliged to go on other and earlier trains were enabled to meet with us.

Two unmistakable indications of the presence of the Holy Spirit among us have been noticeable from the commencement.

First. An entire abandonment of self and a determination to be wholly consecrated. At every meeting this feeling has been more or less developed in the remarks and prayers. A request from a Christian brother in Boston to us for prayer that he might be "entirely emptied of self and filled with the spirit," seems to express a want generally felt among us and fervent prayers went up for him and all, that we might be freed from bondage and receive the blessing of full salvation.

Second. A desire for active, aggressive work. While it is delightful to meet together for worship, we do not forget those who are careless and unconcerned around us. Sunday School teachers are visiting their scholars. Prayers are requested for one scholar who may receive lovingly a letter addressed to her upon the subject of personal religion by her teacher.

The liquor saloon called the "Central Hotel," is to be renovated and fitted up for the purpose of holding evening meetings to draw in those not in the habit of frequenting the place of prayer, while the admonition to "watch for souls as they that must give account," is brought home to the individual heart. We owe much to the hearty co-operation of our pastors who are present at our meetings to counsel and cheer.

> "Yes, we trust the day is breaking > Joyful times are near at hand."

BLOOMFIELD, Nov. 18, 1875.

LOCAL ITEMS.

At the M. E. Church next Sunday evening, the regular Anniversary of the Sabbath School will be held.

The West End Union Prayer Meeting is to be held this evening, at Mr. H. A. Lee's residence, on Linden avenue.

The steamer Bolivia, which carried out among her passengers a party from Bloomfield, arrived safely at her destination on Tuesday last.

The Eucleian Society will invite their friends to attend a public meeting on the 29th inst. The principal feature of the exercises will be a Reading by a lady of acknowledged proficiency.

A Union Thanksgiving Service is to be held in the Baptist church next Thursday morning at the usual hour. Rev. Mr. Ballantine, of the First Presbyterian church, is to preach the sermon.

Morning Prayer Meetings are being held in Eucleian Hall, and are largely attended by the leading Church workers of the village. The late "Central Hotel," on Washington avenue, has been engaged for a series of evening Revival Meetings, to be commenced in a few days.

The church friends of Mr. Charles Ellor of Watsessing surprised him last Monday evening by a home visit, and presentation to him and his wife of a parlor stove and handsome family Bible, in kindly appreciation of his gratutious services as organist in the M. E. Church.

Mr. Frank De Gress and family left Bloomfield for Mexico on Tuesday. They went by the steamer City of Havana, which sailed from New York on Wednesday.

Baker & Hubbell, Grocers and Fruit dealers, announce the opening of their new store, at the Center, on Wednesday evening of next week, preparatory to the Thanksgiving Festival.

Your Thanksgiving dinner, next Thursday, will be incomplete without oysters from the well-known market of Samuel Moore, on Glenwood avenue.

Chas. Van Court has leased the new meat market now being fitted up by Mr. Corby, on Glenwood avenue.

Mr. Cohn, of the Bloomfield Surprise and Emporium of Fashion, has just received a varied assortment of Pants Stuffs for mens' and boys' wear which he will sell at very low prices.

Some boys, while hunting rabbits in a village near Philadelphia, the other day, came across a box containing $40,000 in bank notes, hidden near the edge of a river. The notes were issued by the Shenandoah Valley Bank of Virginia, and some of them were unsigned. They had evidently been stolen before the breaking out of rebellion, and hidden in the place where the boys found them.

Elizabeth had a grand Masonic pageant on Tuesday last, when a New York Commandery of Knights Templar were tendered a reception by St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth. There were several hundred Knights in costume.

A large number of excursions from England to America during the Centennial have been arranged, some of which will come by special steamers.

It is said that Mr. Brakeley, who lives in Warren county, a few miles above Easton, gathered 4,000 bushels of apples in his orchard this Fall, all of which he sold for $1 per bushel.

It is thought that the trial of Chas. K. Landis will bring together the largest array of legal talent seen in any South Jersey Court for years.

Important Notice!

We take pleasure in announcing to the citizens of Bloomfield and vicinity that we intend to formally open our New Store, corner of Glenwood and Washington Avenues, for the wholesale and Retail Grocery, Provision and Fruit Cash Trade on WEDNESDAY, the 24th inst., at 7 o'clock P. M., promptly, where we shall be happy to greet our numerous friends with a pleasant Thanksgiving entertainment. In this new enterprise in which we are to engage we are encouraged by the judicious counsels of many of our most enterprising and valued citizens, and a firm conviction of our own better judgment, formed deliberately from a number of years of close and careful observation; in which decision we know personally that very many of our friends acquiesce.

In arriving at this conclusion we have not consulted our own selfish desires or wishes. We trust that Infinite wisdom has been our guide in this matter, from whence we have ever sought counsel.

We believe we are prepared, from nearly twenty years' acquaintance in New York, to select and purchase goods on such liberal terms as to enable us to offer them to all who shall deem it to their interest to favor us with their patronage on terms mutually satisfactory.

Judge us not before the time, but come, see, and examine for yourselves.

The Housekeeper.

THIS is an excellent monthly publication, devoted to domestic economy in all its branches. The November number, just received, contains sixteen pages of interesting and valuable reading matter, and fully maintains the high standard of its previous issues. Following the usual editorial paragraphs on the first page is an article on "The providing and Care of Family Stores," by Catherine E. Beecher, which, with the abundant information to be found under the headings "Marketing" and "Shopping," will prove invaluable to every housekeeper. "Daisy Eyebright" tells "How to Furnish a House," and another writer discusses "Domestic Economy." Next follows an exposure of certain "Household Humbugs and Dangers" headed by a cut of a mastiff's head, as an intimation, we suppose, that all frauds will be searched out and shown up with watch-dog courage and vigor in THE HOUSEKEEPER. A number of letters from different correspondents are given, and then follows the "Kitchen" department, with a month's supply of tempting recipes from the private cook book of a well-known authoress, we are told, who has tasted them all. All the other departments, the "Laundry," "Dining Room," "Bed Room," Library," "Nursery," &c., are as usual full of suggestions, to help make the home comfortable and attractive. The hints upon suitable home occupation will specially please the ladies, while the articles and paragraphs showing "What to do for a Living" will find numerous readers. There is a beautiful illustration of a new propagating case and bulb garden in the "Window Garden." department. Lastly, under the "Medicine Chest," the first of a series of "Talks About Teeth," by Dr. Farrar, an expert in dentistry, will be found, which conveys much useful knowledge in a popular way. There is the customary amount of miscellaneous matter, and altogether the number is the best one thus far issued. Chas. F. Wingate & Co., publishers, 52 John street, New York.

Startling Suicide in Newark.

At an early hour Wednesday morning a rumor was circulated in Newark, that Alderman J. C. Johnson had committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. At first the rumor was generally discredited, but subsequent inquiry revealed the fact that it was true. Alderman Johnson resided at No. 123 Clinton street, and was a gentleman widely known and highly respected. He retired on Tuesday night at the usual hour, and was was apparently in a cheerful frame of mind. About 4 o'clock yesterday morning his wife heard him get up and go into the bath-room, and a few moments later she was alarmed by the report of a pistol. She rushed in and found her husband lying on the floor with a Colt's five-barreled revolver by his side and the blood oozing from a bullet hole in his right temple. From the nature of the wound and the position in which the body was found, it was inferred that the suicide bent down before the mirror so as to get a surer aim. The ball passed diagonally through his head, in such a manner that the physicians who were summoned are of the opinion that death was instantaneous. Mr. Johnson was about forty-seven years old. In 1874 he was elected Alderman, and his course while in the Board won for him the esteem of all parties. He was a prominent member of the Board of Trade and held the office of President last year. He was also one of the Directors, and for a time acting President of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' National Bank of New-York, and also a Directer in a savings bank in Newark. Although not a professed Christian, he was President of the Board of Trustees of the South Park Presbyterian Church and a regular attendant at the services. He was President and Treasurer, as well as the principal stockholder, in the Newark Tea Tray Company, which had lately become involved in serious difficulties. This fact caused him great annoyance and trouble, although it is confidently belived that his New-York resources would have enabled him to pull through successfully. His brother-in-law, Mr. Harrison, advised him to relize his assets in New-York, and devote his entire attention to the Tray Company, and he agreed to follow that advice, but it seems that after Mr. Harrison left him his dependency returned. The sad event is the subject of conversation throughtout the entire city, and the opinion is generally expressed that deceased must have been demented.

THE BURIAL OF GUIBORD.—On Tuesday, the remains of Joseph Guibord were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery of Montreal, and it is now confidently hoped that the famous Guibord trouble is at an end forever. The burial was in every way a civil one, the first of the kind that has ever occurred in a Roman Catholic cemetery in Canada. Barrel after barral of cement prepared for the purpose was poured upon the coffin. Then iron clippings and filings were thrown in to render the mass solid and to prevent drilling. More cement was then poured in. Through it strips of iron were interlaced, forming a net work about the coffin. The whole mass was covered by a layer of broken stones and then by eight inches of cement. Above this the earth formed a mound some two feet high. During the time which it took to do this work the crowd stood about silent and almost motionless, but just as the last shovelful of earth was being thrown on the mound a wildeyed young man forced his way through the line of Police, and, going up to the grave, he uncovered his head and in French said, with great emotion: "He was my master. I am a printer. He taught me my trade and I will make the sign of the cross for him—for Joseph Guibord." He then crossed himself and quietly left the inclosure. He was not molested as he passed through the crowd. On Sunday next, according to the present arrangements, Bishop Bourget will curse the grave which was made with so much trouble and after so much litigation.

State Superintendent Apgar will address the Jersey City Board of Education on Monday evening, on the plan of having the pupils of all the schools in the State send specimens of their work to the Centennial Exhibition.
